UNFAILING
EYE PRESERVERS!
The large and increasing Sales of our celebrated
Perfect Spectacles
AND
EYE GLASSES,
In Massillon and vicinity by our Agent,
Louis Schaufele, Jeweler,
Is a sure proof of their great superiority over the ordinary glasses. We are satisfied that the reality of the advantages secured by their use, viz:
The Brilliance of Sight!
The perfect ease & comfort,
And the readily ascertained improvement of the eyes, conscious and unconscious as it invariably is, would be sufficient to induce their almost general adoption by the residents of this locality. And the result has proved we were right—as an assistant to and

Preservers of the Sight.
To extend our old age they are unapproachable, and are really cheap. Because lasting so many years without change being necessary. Mr. Louis Schaufele, Jeweler, is the sole and only agent in this locality and has always on hand a full assortment of Cold, Silver, Steel, and Shell Frames.
Suitable for every difficulty of the sight.
CAUTION!—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not supply or employ Peddlers here or elsewhere. Be aware of their false representations to the contrary.

A FAIR OFFER.
R. V. Pierce, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y., is the proprietor of D. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, which he warrants to cure catarrh in all its stages. And further, he offers $500 for a case of that dreadful disease that he cannot cure. If your druggist has not yet got this remedy on sale, don't put off with some worse than worthless strong snuff, fumigator, or poisonous caustic solution, but enclose sixty cents to the proprietor and it will reach by return mail. For sale by most druggists everywhere.

M. M. Pomeroy, of the La Crosse Democrat, on Roback's Stomach Bitters.
C. W. Roback, of Cincinnati, is making the best article of bitters, now manufactured in the United States or elsewhere. We have used them for three years, and would not be without them for almost any money. In the spring his stomach bitters are worth hundreds of dollars for keeping the stomach in order, and cleansing the blood from its accumulated impurities. It is not once in two years that we endorse so-called patent medicines, but Roback's are worthy of all the praise we can bestow on them.

An eminent physician of Ohio, in speaking of Whittlesse's Dyspepsia Cure, says: For students of sedentary habits, it is the very best remedy in the world for obviating the constipation so troublesome and health destroying to them at that important and interesting period of their lives. If used regularly, their bowels will seldom or never become constipated, and the use of the remedy is not attended with inconvenience or trouble, and never interferes in the smallest degree with study or diet.

The following is an extract from a private letter written by the proprietors of the Plantation Bitters.
We had no conception of the wide spread suffering which exists, or of the almost insupportable pains produced by the Plantation Bitters when we first commenced offering them for sale. We now find that every house has a weak child, an ailing parent, or debilitated aged member, who needs this tonic. Our laboratory has grown from a single room to an immense building, and our sales from a few bottles to many hundred dozens per day, and we are glad to know that they have done you so much good.

MAGNOLIA WATER.—Superior to the best imported German Cologne, and sold at half the price.—172 1/2

EYE PRESERVERS!
The large and increasing Sales of our celebrated
Perfect Spectacles
AND
EYE GLASSES,
In Massillon and vicinity by our Agent,
Louis Schaufele, Jeweler,
Is a sure proof of their great superiority over the ordinary glasses. We are satisfied that the reality of the advantages secured by their use, viz:
The Brilliance of Sight!
The perfect ease & comfort,
And the readily ascertained improvement of the eyes, conscious and unconscious as it invariably is, would be sufficient to induce their almost general adoption by the residents of this locality. And the result has proved we were right—as an assistant to and

Preservers of the Sight.
To extend our old age they are unapproachable, and are really cheap. Because lasting so many years without change being necessary. Mr. Louis Schaufele, Jeweler, is the sole and only agent in this locality and has always on hand a full assortment of Cold, Silver, Steel, and Shell Frames.
Suitable for every difficulty of the sight.
CAUTION!—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not supply or employ Peddlers here or elsewhere. Be aware of their false representations to the contrary.

By-and-by. There's a little relief making life, who is ever night, Thawing every undertaking, And his name is By-and-by.

What we ought to do this minute, 'Will be better done, 'll' say, 'If to-morrow we'll begin it, 'Put it off,' says By-and-by.

Those who lead his treacherous wooing, Will his faithless guidance rue; What we always put off doing, Clearly we shall never do.

We shall reach what we endeavor, If on Now we do rely, But unto the realms of Never Leads the pilot By-and-by.

Poetical Extracts.
Oh, Absalom! my son! my son! His Beccie was white as snow; He stole a pig, and away he ran To the Bay of Biscay, O!

The boy stood on the burning deck And smacked his pipe of clay, And bet his money on the bonneted man When the moon had gone away.

It is the hour when from the boughs I kissed my Molly Ann, So run, Elijah, and hurry up Popsy, Yes, or any other man.

O, what are the wild waves saying? I cried the whole night through, And a voice replied far up the height, A little more eider, too.

The harp of nature's advent strung Is coming through the rye; Then kiss me quick and so my honey, Said the spider to the fly.

My Willie's on the dark, blue sea, At five hundred thousand more, My dars are gliding swiftly by To the old Kentucky's o're.

Candy for Children.
You know that the stomach of a child is very delicate, very sensitive—quite as much so as the eye; but, if you add to the milk pepper, the eye becomes red, and so does the stomach. Cold water is grateful to the eye, to relieve this inflammation, and it is equally so to the stomach. Now candy is but little less irritating than pepper; it creates the same redness, the same grade of inflammation, and there is the same demand for water to quench the insupportable flame. In such a stomach, healthy digestion ceases; the appetite fails; the blood becomes poor and watery, and the tissues are impoverished. It is not the sugar that does the harm; for pure sugar is healthy; it forms part of the milk of the infant, and enters largely into many of our best vegetables. It is the sugar mixed with various other articles, often poisonous, and the process of manufacture that render candy so injurious.

You mean to do well by your child, but you are slowly and certainly effacing her life. At this critical period of her life, when, for proper development and growth, she needs a supply of nourishing and easily digested food, you give her these detestable compounds of burnt sugar and poisons, which not only slowly poison her system, but, worst of all, deprive her of appetite, and even of the power of digestion. If you persist in this course, it is not difficult to predict the result; the chances that your child will reach womanhood will be diminished ten-fold; if she reach adult years, it will not prove adult life in her case, but rather a dwarfed and imbecile maturity. Her certain inheritance will be dyspepsia, a morbid appetite for crude and indigestible articles, and chronic and incurable diseases, which will render her irritable and peevish, and lead to premature old age and death in mid-life. Hecarth and Hecarth.

Lay a Fainting Person Down.
Says a physician in Hecarth and Hecarth:

"It is surprising how eagerly everybody rushes at a fainting person, and strives to raise him up, and especially to keep the head erect. There must be an instinctive apprehension that, if a person seized with a fainting or other fit fall into a recumbent position, death is more imminent. I must have driven a mile to-day while a lady, fainting, was held upright. I found her pulseless, white and apparently dying, and I believe, if I had delayed ten minutes longer, she would have really died. I laid her head down on a lower level than her body, and immediately color returned to her lips and cheeks, she became conscious. To the excited group of friends, I said: 'Always remember this fact—namely: fainting is caused by a want of blood in the brain; the heart ceases to act with sufficient force to send the usual amount of blood to the brain, and hence the person loses consciousness because the functions of the brain cease. Restore the blood to the brain, and instantly the person recovers. Now, though the blood is propelled to all parts of the body by the action of the heart, yet it is still under the influence of the laws of gravitation. In the erect position the blood ascends to the head against gravitation, and the supply to the brain is diminished, as compared with the recumbent position, the heart's pulsation being equal. If, then, you place a person in a sitting position, whose heart has nearly ceased to beat, his brain will fail to receive the blood, while if you lay him down, with the head lower than the heart, the blood will run into the brain by mere force of gravity; and, in fainting, in sufficient quantity to restore consciousness. Indeed, nature teaches us how to manage fainting persons, for they always fall, and frequently are at once restored by the recumbent position into which they are thrown.'"

CRAWLED UP.—An exchange gives the following:
Once upon a time a gentleman found in his hen-roost a simple minded soul of the vintage, who lived without visible means of support.
"What are you doing here, you rascal? Stealing my chickens?"
"No, sir," was the response; "I ain't thought of doing nothing of the sort." It unfortunately happened that the simple minded individual wore a high straw hat, of the dimensions of a bee hive, and the crown thereof was dilapidated to a serious extent. Just as he put in the denial, the head of a young pullet was seen to protrude from the aperture.

"See there," said the gentleman; "now did that chicken get in your hat?"
"Well," exclaimed the simple minded individual, with an air of honest surprise and embarrassment, "that is the strangest thing that ever happened me. I suppose the damned critter must crawled up my trousers leg!"

How They Make Pins in Waterbury, Conn.

Waterbury, Conn., is probably the most noted for its brass manufacturing of any in the country, and of course it is a head center for the fabrication of pins. We take the following sketch of the operation of making these indispensable little articles from the Boston Commercial Bulletin:

Formerly pins were made of brass wire exclusively; but a few years ago some genius, reflecting on the heavy cost of brass, and the small profit to be derived from the manufacture of brass pins, conceived the idea of making them of iron. Presently the market was stuck full of iron pins, so skillfully made that only an expert could distinguish them from the genuine brass by simple inspection. They were made of iron wire, and whitened by a process which will be spoken of hereafter. Although they cost only half as much as brass pins, they were sold for the same price at retail, and many a country store-keeper turned an honest penny by palming them off on innocent old ladies for pins of the best quality. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to state that iron pins will bend on slight provocation, and in point of serviceableness will bear no comparison with the brass pins. The legitimate trade, however, was so injured by this practical competition that all the factories had to make iron pins in self-defense. The liability of iron to rust was obvious, and in pin manufacture, by lubricating the wire with oil as it passed through the one of the final processes. The black pins used on mourning goods are the common brass pins japanned.

A pin machine is about as large as a Wheeler & Wilson. Near by it hangs a reel of brass wire, one end of which is brought in contact with the machine, which cuts off pin lengths with singular rapidity. Instantly, each length, separated from the coil, is struck by a little hammer three times on its end. This blow forms the head of the pin, and is really the only mysterious operation of a pin machine. The hammer strikes somewhat like a blacksmith's hammer in forming the head of a bolt.

From the process of heading the pins are carried by a revolving wheel under a series of small files, which point them. They then drop into a receiver, and the pin machine proper is done with them. One machine makes 170 pins per minute. Pins are pointed in oil, and when they leave the machine are greasy and dirty. The first step is to cleanse them. To this end a bushel or more are put into a revolving barrel containing sawdust. Thence they are removed and placed in kettles, together with plates of tin perforated like a colander—the pins and tin being laid in alternate layers. The kettles contain water with a dash of aquafortis; steam is introduced, and the water boils three hours; the tin is deposited uniformly on the pins, and they emerge of a whitish but dull hue. Polish is then given them by agitation in a revolving barrel containing but sawdust, and they are finished pins. The deposit of tin on each pin is infinitely thin, and the amount of that metal used in whitening five or six million pins—a day's product of the American Company's mill—is surprisingly small.

However curious and intelligent the pin machine proper, which the writer had not the privilege of seeing, may be, there are certain other machines used in pin manufacturing whose operation sufficiently excites the wonder of the visitor. One of these is the sorting machine, by means of which the good pins are separated from the bad or imperfect. It comprises a system of belts, which move forward horizontally and vibrate from side to side with a gentle motion. From a receptacle or hopper above, the pins, good and bad, are turned upon these belts; a crooked or imperfect pin sticks to the belt and is carried to the end of the machine, where it is dropped out, while the perfect pins, smooth and symmetrical, have no hold upon the belts, but are speedily shaken off into a receiver below.

Another very interesting machine is the separator, whose office is to assort the pins according to their sizes. Formerly, before the invention of this machine, pins got unavoidably mixed in the factory, and the work of separating them by hand being too great they were sold like mixed candy, as pound pins, the principal market for them being among the negroes at the south. This machine obviates this necessity, and does the work of a hundred hands in assorting the demoralized pins. It comprises an inclined plane, a revolving wheel, and a numerous set of steel fingers, which operate as follows: The pins slide down the inclined plane up on the wheel, which revolves horizontally; this catches them and carries them around to contact with the fingers; these select the pins according to their size and drop them in different receptacles. The delicacy and accuracy of these fingers may be inferred from the fact that they recognize the difference of one-sixteenth of an inch in the length of two pins, and dispose of them accordingly.

English pin manufacturers for years knew no better method of sticking the pins in papers, which is an important part of the business, though it seems trifling, than by hand work, and they used to give out pins in quantities to families of poor people to be stuck by hand. American inventive genius has done away with this slow and wasteful process, and furnished machines which do the work better and with infinitely greater rapidity. Samuel Slocum, who was one of the earliest American pin manufacturers, was the first inventor of improvements on the old English hand bar for sticking pins. His machine was in use for many years in the principal pin factories of the country, but about fifteen years ago gave place to another invention.

The power sticking machine consists of a table which revolves very slowly; placed upon this the pins are dropped into a revolving cylinder, whose longitudinal ribs throw them upon an endless chain; the links of this chain are notched, and the pins catching in the notches and hanging by their heads, are borne forward to a gate on which is the paper to be filled, and are pressed into their places in the paper; a crimp simultaneously acts on the paper, holding it in place and making a place or crease for the pins.

The operation of the hand sticking machine is quite different. The pins, placed in a kind of a hopper, slide down and are caught by their heads between conductors placed together like the halves of a roof; thence they run into a slide through a goose neck the notches fill with pins; then the slide is drawn back, a crimp descends on the paper, and holds it till the pins are driven through it. By this machine, attended by one person, 1,000 to 1,200 papers of pins can be stuck per day. After the pins are stuck, they are carefully inspected and placed in papers, and are ready for market.

Notes from 'Long Branch.'

Helmhold's Store is the feature of the Metropolitan Hotel block, and one of the leading institutions of New York. There are many older establishments of the kind in the city, but not one that can rival it in splendor of exterior appearance and internal decoration; not one that is the center of such a marvelous scheme of energy and enterprise. One would hardly think so, as passing through the spacious entrance, and up the polished marble floor, absolute quiet would be found to reign everywhere supreme. The show cases full of quaint and classic vases, jars and flasks gorgeously labelled, look like names of brightly variegated summer flowers. All around is light and color, and delicately brilliant devices of exquisite embellishment. The gentlemanly clerks who attend upon the calls of retail customers, might be taken for a party of the most accomplished of 'Brown's young men' just ready for a lounge at the Academy of Music, or a bold dash into the mazes of the German at the last fashionable ball of the season. It is difficult to realize the fact that, without a particle of bustle or hurrying, or confusion, twenty-four hours rarely pass but the receipts in this department alone reach away into the thousands. Of course the returns of the whole sale office are infinitely greater. This beautiful palace of Business, however, attractive as it is in the day time, is still more resplendent under the influence of gas. It then becomes more like a vision of fairyland, or a realized page from the Arabian Nights' Entertainment than anything else that can be suggested. It can only be compared to the grand transformation scene in a pantomime, suddenly made genuine in all its glory, instead of the mere reflection of stage paint and tinsel. This effect is heightened to a degree that ordinary powers of description cannot adequately describe, by the man-moth Crystal Prismatic Mortar, which radiates a flood of rainbow hued light over the front of the store. This surpassingly superb illuminator was manufactured by McLewee & Putnam of 561 Broadway, and is composed of 20,000 cut crystals distributed over a wire frame.

It seems scarcely credible that less than eighteen years ago, Mr. Helmhold (virtually) initiated the plan of business which has brought him fame and fortune, with a cash capital of about $2,000. He spends five times that amount now each week in advertising alone. That is the key note to the unparalleled triumph by which his exertions have been crowned. He had the foresight and shrewdness to see that publicity was essential to success, and he had the pluck and persistency to promptly put his ideas into execution. The results of his experiment were hopelessly encouraging from the very start. Every dollar that he paid out for newspaper space, for bills and posters, or any means for keeping his name before the public, came back to him with ten-fold increase. As fast as it came back it was put forth again in the same way, and so kept on increasing and multiplying until the little office on Chestnut street, Philadelphia, gradually grew into the finest store in that city, and thence developed the New York offshoot, which is now the palace of Broadway. Mr. Helmhold advertises in more than half of all the newspapers published in the United States. His books show current transactions with more than 2,700 of them. He has paid to several of the leading journals, as much as from fifteen to three thousand dollars for a single insertion of one of his colossal pronouncements. On one occasion—the day before the news arrived of the fall of Richmond—he offered the New York Herald five thousand dollars for a page of that issue; but the pressure of stirring news was so great as to preclude the possibility of accommodating him. A man that conducts business campaigns on such a scale must have a powerful strain of the Napoleonic in his nature. Such a one forces those smiles and favors from the coy, capricious goddess Fortune which she denies to less bold and resolute wooers.

A Hard Shell Sermon.

[From the El Paso (Nl) Journal.]

Most people have read the sermon on the text, 'They shall gnaw a file and flee into the mountains of Hepsidam, where the lion roareth and the whang-doodle mourneth for its first-born,' and have laughed at it as a witty invention, but we have something that actually happened that will banish the whang-doodle into the vale of tears, and cause the lion to dry up incontinently.

Wm Reynolds, of Peoria, is well known as an earnest worker in the Sabbath school cause. He is perhaps better known than any other man in the state, and we give the following as he tells it, as near as we remember. The main facts are all absolutely true. He was in the southern part of the state last week, organizing Sunday schools, when he encountered a hard shell Baptist neighborhood. The minister settled over the little flock, look-with jealousy upon the movements of the new lights, and finally announced his intention of preaching a sermon against them. On the Sabbath designated, the Sunday school men gathered in force, when the preacher announced that well known text:

"Thou art Peter! and on this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

After giving Peter a good setting out, the minister closed as follows, in that peculiar singing tone that is indelible, except to those who have heard it:

"Yes, my brethering, ah—an' the gates of hell shel not prevail agin it, ah! Now, you'd like to know about these gates of hell, ah! Well, my brethering, there are four gates of hell, ah!

"Thar is, firstly, the Sunday school system. There is one gate to hell ah, where they bring young men and wimmen together ah, and under the idee of 'teachin' on 'em the Bible, they set 'em hankerin' arter one another ah, an so open wide the gate o' hell ah.

"An the next gate o' hell is wuss'n the first ah. Thar is Bible so-si-ties ah, whar they put the word into the hands o' them as haint larnin' sufficient ah, for to understand it ah; an' this here, my brethering, is one of the wuss gates o' hell ah, of which we read about in the Bible ah.

"And the next gate o' hell, my brethering, is temperance societies ah, whar they go rite into yer house and bust into yer rooms ah, and try to dis-kiver ef ye hev anything ah, that is good for the stomick's sake ah, an' when they find it they spill it out onto the ground ah, and let it run to waste ah.

(Signs of dissatisfaction among his church members. Greatly excited, he continued):

"Yis, brethering they do, ah. They are 'bout' to bust up all o' our business, an'—an', ah, tharby they open anoth-gate o' hell, ah. These are the men that air, ah, goin' to eum amongst us, and prevail, ah, agin the rock on which will I found my church, ah. Yis, my brethering, ah, they air sot out to do it, ah, an' we must jine hands, ah, an' war agin 'em, ah, that they shel not prevail, ah.

"An, the next gate o' hell, my brethering ah, is the republican party, ah. (Signs of approval from his auditors.) Yis, brethering, ah, the republikin party, ah, wot hez sit all the niggers free, ah, and turned 'em agin their masters ah, an agin them as put thar money in 'em, ah, an' hez cheeted an' robbed the south, ah, outen it's natural rites ah, an' the gates o' hell shel not prevail agin it, ah."

We can give the preachers name and address, if necessary. The party were too much annoyed to take accurate notes. But Mr Reynolds himself will vouch for the truth of what we have written. Truth is stranger than fiction.

MANHOOD—How Lost, How Restored.
Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated work
On the Radical Cure (without medicine) of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatocoea, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emission, Languor, Nervous Debility, and ailments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits mental and physical, neuropathy, etc.
[77] Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents.
The world renowned Author, in this admirable lecture, clearly proves from his own experience, that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, leeches, instruments, rings or cordials—pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cleanly, privately, and radially.
This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.
Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of 6 cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing Dr. Culverwell, "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents, 214 3m
